Aussprachekurs

*Der Alte verliert eines der größten Menschenrechte:
er wird nicht mehr von seines Gleichen beurteilt.*

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe

This chapter is dedicated to study the German language pronunciation. The content is based on the first chapter of the book [1], on the Aussprachekurs from Professor Raville in [5], and on the pronunciation indicated in [4] and [10] using International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA).

Accent and pronunciation

According to [5], accent is a particular way of pronouncing certain phonemes, which can change the melody and rhythm of a particular word or phrase. While pronunciation has a more rigid structure which, even with the variation in accents, must be preserved so as not to compromise the communication process. Therefore, this material focus on German standard pronunciation (Standardaussprache) to keep the speech clear during verbal communication.

To check the stressed¹ syllable of German words, the website of the famous German dictionary Duden can be consulted at the following link <https://www.duden.de/>. To check phonetic transcription and etymology, Wiktionary, the free dictionary available in <https://en.wiktionary.org/wiki/> has an excellent database. Finally, to check pronunciation with audio recordings of native speakers, the website <https://www.forvo.com/> is a great option.

How to improve the pronunciation in German

In [5], the following tasks are suggested to improve pronunciation:

- Always read aloud, and use a voice recorder frequently.
- Check your pronunciation on Google Translate or similar online translators. Do they “understand” you?
- Identify what is most challenging for you to pronounce and practice a lot until you master it.
- When speaking German, articulate a lot and exaggerate. This is normal in the beginning.
- Sing in German.

¹In linguistics, and particularly phonology, stress or accent is the relative emphasis or prominence given to a certain syllable in a word or to a certain word in a phrase or sentence [9]. But this accent must not be confused with the sociolinguistic meaning of accent mentioned on the previous paragraph, which is a way of pronouncing a language that is distinctive to a country, area, social class, or individual [7].

A

Letter name [a]. In words, this letter sounds like the a in algae.

Examples:

1. aus: [aus]
2. auf: [auf]
